

CECOM DOTS and DASHES

- 5 The Decisive Edge
- 11 The Critical Link
- 24 Around the Command
- 28 History Highlights

Command Priorities

Since I took command back in May, I've had the opportunity to visit a large portion of the CECOM footprint in multiple locations. I can say that I'm both encouraged and inspired by what I've seen. Given the broad depth and scope of our mission, which at its core involves developing, integrating, providing and sustaining the logistics readiness of our Army's C4ISR weapon systems and enablers, we truly have an opportunity to make a difference.

That being said, there is no place my family and I would rather be or job I would rather have. Being here at CECOM and Aberdeen Proving Ground provides a great opportunity to help posture our Army for the future strategic environment.

During my travels of our world-class organizations, I've had a chance to assess some of the challenges we will face, such as -- developing and sustaining our competitive advantage with a quality workforce, evolving many of our enterprise processes as we transition to sustainment, and having the right capability (training, engineering, field support) in place to enable readiness.

In order to overcome the aforementioned challenges, I've developed four initial priorities I believe will posture CECOM to fulfill our mission under the strategic guidance of AMC and the Army:

.....➤ cover story continued on next page

Can you decode
what's in this box?

To find the answer, go to page 30.

